- Pre-service and In-service Professional Development Programmes

- M.Sc. Self-Supporting Program: Due to increasing demand of the graduates in life-sciences and for those deserving students who could not get admission in the morning class, M.Sc. evening program was launched as a Replica program. The courses of study are exactly similar as morning classes and other rules/ regulation applicable to morning classes will also be applicable to evening classes. This class also accommodates the in-service persons who could attend morning the classes. However, only those students are admitted in the evening class who fulfill the normal prerequisites for M.Sc. morning class. The total dues for 2 year degree are Rs.175,000.
- In-Service Ph.D. Program: The Department of Zoology stands amongst those departments / institutes of the University of the Punjab, which have been producing maximum number of Ph.Ds. One hundred twenty three (123) Ph.D. degrees have been awarded by this Department upto June 2010. Since 2001 Higher Education Commission (HEC) approved regular Ph.D. Program has been started which has replaced the previous program. The theses are evaluated by experts from technologically advanced countries for the award of degree. Following registration, by the Board of Advanced Studies and Research of the university, the scholars were required to carry out research under the supervision of their respective supervisors. The candidates may conduct their research work in laboratories of other research development organizations. Infact, many scientists working in National and International Organizations had been registered in this way. After working out the research problem, under expert supervision, the research dissertations are submitted for evaluation. M.S./M.Phil. with 3.0 CGPA is one of the pre-requisites for admission to this program along with several others. The candidates have to complete initially, a course work of 18 credit hours, followed by comprehensive examinations before commencement of Ph.D. research project. The Ph.D. Scholar can submit his/her dissertation based upon findings of research work within the period of 3-5 years. The University of the Punjab allowed this program from June 2010 for employers of the R & D organization and college teachers. The term & conditions for this program are exactly same as for regular Ph.D. Program except that the course work will be conducted during summer holidays maximum 12 credit hours each year. The candidate may carry out their research at their respective organization with monitoring system arranged by the University as per HEC criteria.
